

Climate floating not boating

Inundated halls, a drowning tide,
Where students strive, ambitions wide.
Waters surge, dreams pushed aside,
Flooding chaos, hopes denied.

Books and papers, now sodden sheets,
Knowledge lost, the heart depletes.
Classrooms vanish, like fleeting beats,
Education drowned, the soul retreated.

Torrential rains, anxiety's call,
Drifting minds, with fear enthrall.
Curriculum's bridge, about to fall,
A tempest's grip on learning's sprawl.

Life's rhythm disrupted, hearts forlorn,
Turbulent currents, dreams torn.
Schools submerged, futures worn,
Resilience tested, spirits mourn.

Yet, through adversity, strength takes root,
Community rises, resolute.
Students unite, with purpose acute,
Rebuilding foundations, they won't refute.

Lessons learned, beyond textbooks' realm,
Compassion blooms, like a soothing helm.
Empathy nurtured, hearts overwhelm,
Bonded by floods, they'll overwhelm.

Though waters recede, scars may persist,
Student spirits, they won't desist.
Flooding may alter, but they insist,
In the face of trials, they'll persist.

For in each student, a resilient core,
Flooding won't define them, evermore.
Together they'll rise, stronger than before,

From flood's embrace, a brighter shore.
